Seniors remember Cody

Grads lobby council, get OK to honor late classmate

By Meaghan Downs

A simple button for a simple country boy: just Cody Ramsey's name, the year he would have graduated from Anderson County High School, and the word "unforgettable."

High school seniors Peyton Howard and Rachael Walker said they were driving down US 62 one night about two months ago when they passed the place where their friend and classmate Cody Ramsey had died.

Ramsey, about to enter his senior year at Anderson County High School, was driving back to work to his job in the county park last July when his minivan hit a tree.

Ramsey was pronounced dead on the scene. He was 17.

On that night on US 62, Howard and Walker started talking about Cody, about graduation.

The two seniors, along with a few more of their classmates, crammed into a small room in the high school media center last Thursday to speak before the site-based decision-making council.

They explained that they simply wanted to wear the buttons on their gowns in memory of Cody, that he deserved a walk just like everybody else.

"The design was simple, just like he was simple," Walker told the council.

The high school's graduation ceremony format policy includes a provision for honoring the memory of deceased classmates — a senior can place the late student's cap and gown on an empty chair. His or her name would also be listed in the graduation program.

Principal Ronnie Fields said the site-based council wants to find balance for the graduation ceremony

Water bills could be socked with 911 fee

Officials seek options due to dwindling number of landline phones

By Ben Carlson
News staff

The shrinking number of landline telephones could result in a fee to fund the 911 dispatch center being added to water bills across Anderson County.

Members of the city/county joint 911 Committee have for several months been discussing how to replace the $1.89 monthly landline fee as more and more people drop home phone service and replace it with cell phones or internet-based service called voice over IP.

Committee Chairman Todd Sparrow said Friday that adding a fee to water bills is among several options being considered.

"That's our top option right now," Todd said, adding that other communities faced with the problem are also considering adding an annual fee to property taxes or funding it out of a fiscal court's general operating funds.

Funding for emergency dispatch comes from several sources, including a tax placed on landline and cell

Tractor-trailer crashes into couple's Graefenburg Road home

Downed power line traps driver in truck; no one seriously injured

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

A tractor-trailer crashed into the spare front bedroom of a Graefenburg Road home last Wednesday morning and pulled down a live power line, trapping the driver inside his vehicle for about an hour.

Driver Gurmail Singh Kler, 64, of Canada lost control of the semi truck and dropped off the right shoulder of Graefenburg Road at about 6:23 a.m. Wednesday, Kentucky State Police said.

The tractor-trailer smashed through the front porch and came to a stop in the front bedroom of 1699 Graefenburg Road.

A downed power line fell across the cab of the tractor-trailer, trapping the driver inside and preventing EMS from removing him from the vehicle.

The driver was trapped inside the truck for at least 50 minutes as officials waited for KU to arrive to shut off electricity to the home, Kentucky State Police said.

The driver sustained non-life threatening injuries and was transported to Frankfort Regional Medical Center, police said.

The homeowner and his fiancée were not hurt in the accident.

No ruling yet on case of tied up 3-year-old

Judge doesn't appear convinced that Medleys, Case can't get fair trial here

By Ben Carlson

One of the three public defenders representing the parents and grandmother charged with tying up a 3-year-old child up to 16 hours a day argued Tuesday in Anderson Circuit Court that their clients would not get an impartial trial in Anderson County.

Citing numerous media reports regarding the case, attorney Brent Cox, who represents the child's stepfather, said signed affidavits from two men and examples of the media coverage he filed with his motion should put the burden to keep the trials — scheduled for north and south on Highway 151/Graefenburg Road was rerouted for several hours as police cleared the scene.

Homeowner Brian Flood, who's lived on Graefenburg Road for the last 21 years, said he was watching country music videos in the living room when he first heard, then saw, the tractor-tractor crashing into the front of his home.

Flood estimated there's been about 30 wrecks near his front yard on Graefenburg Road in the time he's lived there, so he knew what a car wreck sounded like.

"I could see the trailer out the door, flipping," Flood said. "It seemed like slow motion when it hit the house."

Flood said the front bedroom used to be occupied by his 21-year-old son, his son's girlfriend and her daughter, but that they had found an apartment and moved out about a month ago.

"Thank God they're gone," he said.

His fiancé, Suzanne Tate of Breckinridge County, was still sleeping when she heard Flood yelling. Flood is currently recovering from recent knee surgery.

"I was afraid he fell or something," Tate said.

Flood said after running to check on his fiancé, he tried exiting the front door, but couldn't.

He went out a side door to see how deep the tractor-trailer had entered his home.

detached from the trailer, Flood and Tate said, they believe the tractor-trailer would have smashed straight through to the back of the residence rather than stopping in the front bedroom and living room areas.

Flood said his house will probably be condemned, depending upon how much structural damage there is.

He said he isn't so much worried about the cost of the damage, but how safe the house is.

In the meantime, he'll be staying with Tate at her last this year and early next — on the Commonwealth's Attorney's office, which is prosecuting the case.

Judge Charles Hickman didn't rule on the matter, but seemed less than convinced that the trials should be moved to another county.

"I understand [the motion] based on pretrial publicity, but there is a plethora of case law that says that's not enough," Hickman said. "There needs to be more for a case to be moved."

Media coverage has been intense in the case involving charges against the child's parents, Rebecca and Herbert Medley, and grandmother Carolyn Case. Each was charged last year when the Kentucky State Police investigated and determined the two women participated in tying up the child for extended periods of time as a means of discipline.

The stepfather acknowledged to police that he knew it was going on but didn't try to stop it.

All three were charged with first-degree criminal child abuse.

Cox, Herbert Medley's attorney, offered no specific examples of media coverage that would taint a potential jury, but apparently offered affidavits to two men to that effect.

Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney David Nutgrass argued that wasn't enough to grant a change of venue.

"The defense has to show [they] can't get a fair trial," Nutgrass said. "Instead they have two identical affidavits."

Hickman, the judge, said he doesn't know the two men who signed the affidavits, identified in court as a Mr. Gilbert and Mr. Barton.

"I don't know these people," Hickman said. "Are they relatives? Friends?"

Hickman said he would take Cox's arguments "under advisement," but did not say when he would issue a ruling.

Following the hearing, Nutgrass said his office agrees with defense that those charged deserve a fair trial, and that it can happen in Anderson County.

"Can they get a fair trial here? Yes," Nutgrass said.

phones, which are collected and distributed by the Anderson County Fiscal Court on recommendation of the 911 Committee.

Those funds are restricted and can be used only for 911 purposes such as equipment and salaries.

But with landlines fading, funding in the landline fund is expected to erode and replacing it is vital, Todd said.

"Right now we have a substantial amount in the 911 fund — around $382,000," he said.

"There's not a funding problem right now because we're still receiving funds from both."

However, Todd said

statistics show that in the past five years, the number of landlines in Anderson County has dwindled from about 6,000 to around 5,400.

It would seem that those dropping landlines for cell phones would be enough to replace the revenue, but Todd said that's not the case. He said cell phone fees are only 70 cents per month, less than half of the $1.89 monthly fee on landlines.

And of that amount, the county only keeps around 62 cents, with the balance going back to the call carrier for "cost recovery."

Added to that problem is the fact that while all contract cell phone providers — such as AT&T and Verizon — remit the tax to the county, some non-contract phone providers don't.

"There is litigation in process over that right now," Todd said, adding that the popular TracFone doesn't remit that tax.

placing 911 fees on water bills.

A judge there has already ruled in favor of Garrard County, but the issue is pending in the state's Court of Appeals.

Todd said the 911 Committee will wait for that," he said. "You get into a question of fairness for people who own several pieces of property."

Judge-Executive John Wayne Conway, who revived the largely inactive 911 Committee shortly after taking office, said he isn't the least bit interested in using the county's general funds for 911, but realizes that something will have to be done to make up the shrinking revenue.

"We need emergency communications, but I'm against that," Conway said.

Conway said he is also concerned that if a fee is added to water bills, people with contract cell phones could be "double dipped," which he opposes.

He's also convinced that simply switching the $1.89 monthly charge from landline phones to water bills won't be enough.

"It will have to be more than $1.89 because you know there are more landlines and cell phones than there are water meters," he said. "I'm concerned about how much that fee will be."

Conway added that in the meantime, he's hoping better options surface.

"There's no way out of doing something about this, but maybe something else will come up that's more reasonable."

Shifting that fee to water bills, though, won't happen right away due to a lawsuit filed by the city of Lancaster against Garrard County that questions the constitutionality of that issue to be settled before making any decisions.

Todd said he doesn't like the idea of placing the fee on property tax bills.

by honoring those who have died, but not making high school graduation into a memorial service.

But Fields said he thought the seniors' request was reasonable, as did the rest of the site-based council members.

The council decided to allow students to wear the buttons in memory of Cody, and included an additional provision to their ceremony format policy that appropriate memorials at graduation are allowed with all future memorials to be decided by the council prior to the graduation date.

"As one of Cody's teachers, I would be honored to wear one of the badges at graduation," site-based decision-making council member and teacher Jim Beward said. "I would stand with you on this one."

"If it was my child, I would be honored," Lois Ann Disponett, parent representative for the site-based council member, said.

Students said they paid for the buttons from their personal funds, creating about 232 memorial buttons for any student that wants one.

No senior would be forced to wear a button on graduation day, the seniors said, and the buttons will be available during graduation practice on Wednesday, May 29.

A group of high school seniors received permission to honor their friend, the late Cody Ramsey, with memorial buttons on graduation. Ramsey died in a car accident in July 2012 and would have been graduating with his class this year. Pictured, from left, are Andrea Hernandez, Brandon Reynolds, Amanda Hicks, Hannah Searcy, Peyton Howard and Rachael Walker after they received permission from the site-based decision-making council at the high school to wear buttons on graduation day in memory of Cody.

A few of Cody's friends were granted permission by his mom, Terri More Ramsey, and gave her a button a few days earlier.

They said she planned on wearing it while watching Cody's classmates walk across the stage and receive their diplomas.

"If he [Cody Ramsey] could do it, he would do it for our mom," Howard said.

The buttons were something Cody would have been comfortable with to remember him by, the seniors said.

"He was just a laid back, simple boy," Walker said.

"He was fine with being ordinary," Brandon Reynolds said.

Reynolds and Andrea Hernandez, another friend of Cody's, said they planned to place a button on Ramsey's grave last Thursday afternoon.

Trustees' pay raise histrionics ridiculous

Conway's glare worth weight in gold

Column as I see 'em ... Library trustees Amy Kennedy and Katie Hutton need to take a deep breath and calm down.

Or at least log onto this newspaper's website and read what I've actually written instead of what they apparently think I have.

Their histrionics during last Tuesday night's library board meeting about getting "slayed" in the newspaper after voting to give library employees a pay increase was, to be kind, unfortunate. To be not so kind, ridiculous.

"It'll be the headline," Hutton said, regarding the pay increase.

"We're going to lose no matter what we do, as we always do," Kennedy said, adding that the library would get "slayed" by the newspaper because of the board's decision to give staff raises.

Ladies, I know your pants are in a wad over the lawsuit filed against the library because you and your predecessors have ignored the law when it comes to setting tax rates. Of course that's my fault because, in doing my job, I pointed it out well over a year ago.

Tough. Each of you has been aware for some time that libraries across the state haven't been following that law, but you've chosen to continue doing it simply because it's what you've been told to do.

Libraries are now reaping what you've sewn and frankly, it's about time.

If you want to assign blame to me for pointing it out, I'll gladly accept it. As a journalist not beholden to anyone other than my readers, it's my job to ensure those in power — and, yes, when you spend other people's tax money, you are in power — follow the letter of the law.

What I won't accept is your combined assertion that I'm going to "slay" the library board for providing a modest pay increase for employees.

Be it the board of health or library board, I defy anyone to find one column or editorial I've written that takes either agency to task over reasonable pay increases, or in which I've had one negative thing to say about their employees.

The leaders of those agencies, not the employees, are responsible for the messes that have been created over the past several years, and I'm not going to sit idly by while you rant, rave and lash out at this newspaper with false assertions that it has spoken out against those employees.

Speaking of ranting and raving ...

Expect plenty of that in the coming months as those proposing an oil/natural gas pipeline come out of the shadows and make their intentions public.

I'm working on a news article about that issue, which basically involves a pipeline crossing a good chunk of the county to carry up to 400 million gallons a day of material "fracked" out of the ground in Pennsylvania to the Gulf Coast.

I've already spoken with a couple of landowners, one of which is downright angry over the prospect of a private company using the power of imminent domain to bury an oil line across his property.

Judge-Executive John Wayne Conway isn't too happy, either, particularly when he was told he'd be provided more information nearly two months ago and hasn't heard a peep from the company since.

"He said they want to come in and address the fiscal court," Conway told me Friday. "I've haven't heard a word from them since. That guy up there bare-faced lied to me."

It's good that Conway's dander is up a bit over this. Although there's almost certainly not a thing his fiscal court can do to stop it, you can bet that he's going to keep a very close eye how people are treated when it comes to gaining access to their land.

You can bet, too, he'll be a downright bear when it comes to this company hauling untold tons of excavating equipment up and down county roads — which he does control — and ensuring that if one ounce of blacktop is disturbed, it's put back to right.

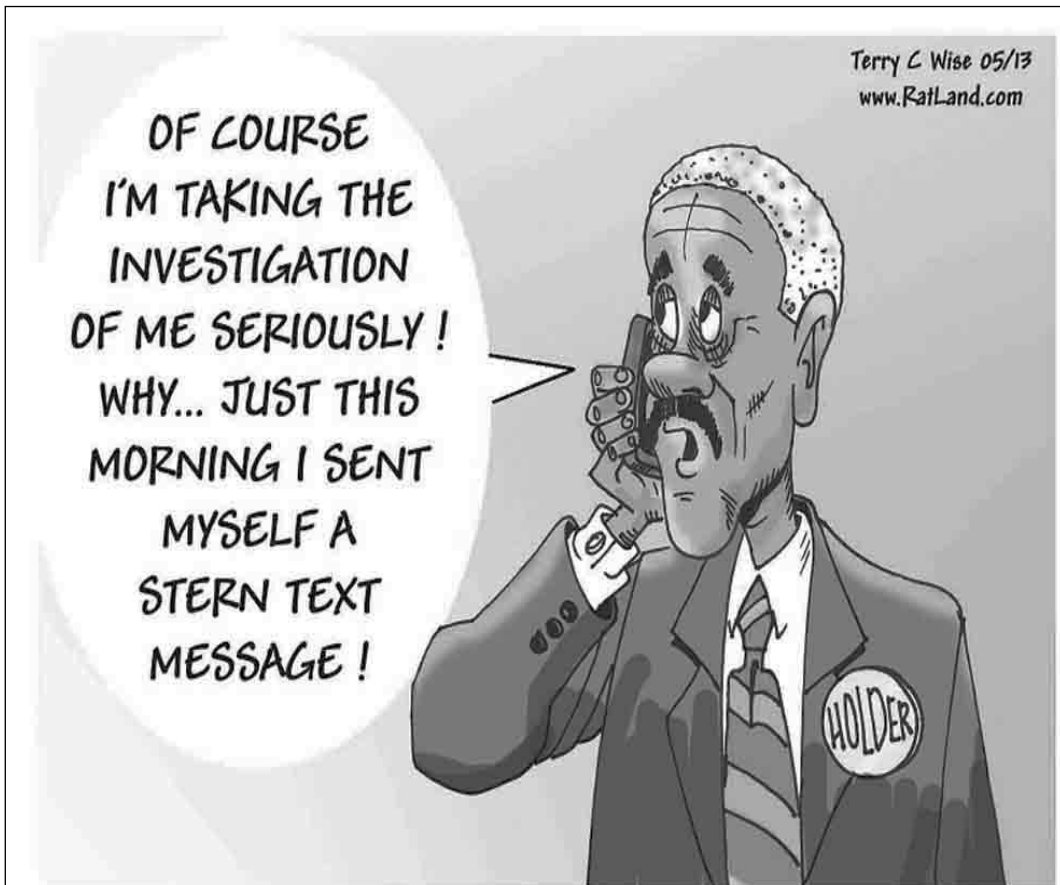

An old blacktop specialist himself, I'd give a week's pay to be on hand if someone tries to slip a road repair past Conway and tell him it's fixed when it's not.

Just the glare that person would receive would be worth its weight in gold.

Don't have your garden in yet? Well, it's time to get cracking

Here it is, the end of May already. The roses are popping and so are the strawberries. Wildflowers splash colors by the roadsides next to the blooming brambles reaching for the sky

I love this time of year. School is out and the stand is open, let summer begin.

If you haven't gotten your garden in yet, then you better get cracking. I like to plant new seeds every two weeks up until the end of July. That way I have a continuous stream of good stuff. It also means that I'll have plenty of stuff left at the end of the season to do some of my canning and preserving, when I have more time.

In addition to gardening chores, this is the time of year to dig and divide your iris, trim the peonies and plant your caladiums and cannas outside.

Those with fruit trees should take time to start a little thinning of fruit for fewer pest problems and a bigger harvest.

This is also the time of year that I begin my annual battle with quack grass. This is that tall, tough grass that has to be pulled out of the garden. If you cut it with a mower or weed eater, all you are doing is re-seeding it ... took me years to figure that one out.

Those with a new strawberry patch may be scratching your head trying to figure out a way to stop the grubs from chewing holes into your beautiful berries. Two methods that are easy to use will stop them from eating.

You can place flat, thin boards on the soil around the strawberry plants. The berries can lay on top of the boards. The grubs will crawl underneath the boards. Each morning, lift the boards and dispose of the grubs.

A second method involves beer.

Grubs seem to like stale beer. They love it so much they drink and drown. Use jar lids to place around the plants. Pour a little beer into each lid to fill. The grubs will crawl into the lid and never touch your strawberries. Just empty the lid when it gets a few bodies.

Now, how about those tomatoes? Some are already harvesting cherries and early girls, but most of us have flowers just starting to set. You can boost your harvest by spraying the plant with a fruit-setting hormone. It's found at any farm store and maybe even a big box store. Don't forget to pick up some oyster shells to sprinkle around the tomatoes. You want plenty of calcium to help beat back blossom end rot.

As the garden plants start their burst of growth, think food. Food for the plants is key as they start to bloom and set fruit. They are using up all the good stuff in the soil at a rapid rate, so you will need to fertilize to replace that food.

An all around fertilizer will work, but something that has more potassium and phosphorous will do the most good. That's what helps roots and fruits to grow. There are liquid fertilizers and dry fertilizers. Just try and get something that is long lasting and slow releasing.

You can side dress fertilize by placing compost or dry fertilizers around the plants themselves. I like to sprinkle greensand and Garden-tone around the stems of my plants. Both are organic, slow release granulars that have a nice mix of food in it.

Now, get out there and get that mulching done. Layers of newspapers, covered with straw or grass clippings, will save you hours of back breaking weeding in the garden, as well as save you watering time. Besides, it's much more pleasant to sit around and admire the plants, instead of the weeds. Happy Growing.

Wishing Anderson County, and myself, a happy anniversary

Inserted in your newspaper this Wednesday are the traditional two-year anniversary gifts: cotton and china.

Not really. Please don't go searching for cotton tufts or delicate china dishes tucked behind your sports section. Unless we have unusual coupons for all of our readers this week, they're not there.

Saturday marks my two-year anniversary of working at The Anderson News.

In the lifespan of the average toddler raging through his terrible 2's, I've learned to make Lawrenceburg and The Anderson News my home.

I've scribbled through about 20 reporter's notebooks, and those are the ones easily within reach at my desk.

Side note: if anyone has a creative crafting idea to repurpose used reporter's notebooks, I'd greatly appreciate any Pinterest aficionados out there.

I save every reporter's notebook, not only for my own records, but as a professional diary of the places I've been, the people I've interviewed, even the more than 24 city council meetings and special-called meetings I've attended.

If ink could talk, those wrinkled pages would probably complain about the arbitrary abbreviations that I scrawl in pidgin journalist shorthand.

To commemorate the two years since I packed up all my meager belongings and moved to Kentucky sight unseen, here's an anniversary gift (not those reporter's notebooks) from me to you: Your community newspaper is important.

You're reading this column right now, so you must place enough value on the newspaper to take a few moments away from your computer, your phone or the needs of your family.

"But Meaghan," you think as your eyes wander down this column to see where exactly my point is, "You're required to say that. You work for the newspaper."

That is true. I do work for the newspaper.

But here's another truth: there is no other media forum so dedicated to serving our community here in Anderson County than the newspaper.

We're committed to fairness.

We're committed to photographing week to week those Anderson County students, volunteers and public servants that make our community a better place.

We're dedicated to keeping those in power accountable.

We're dedicated to producing a product that is not only well worth 75 cents for a single copy, but is vital to keeping our readers abreast of issues that directly affect them even if those issues make them uncomfortable.

My job is to be fair, not to rock readers into a lullaby of complacency.

My job is to present varied aspects of life in Anderson County, those stories about people and places that may make you look at them differently.

One of the first things Editor Ben Carlson told me when I first started working at the newspaper was to find interesting stories.

The concept of something being "interesting" can be frustratingly vague.

Combining tomatoes and chocolate ice cream is "interesting." A documentary about the puppeteer behind Sesame Street's Elmo could be "interesting."

I choose to think about

"interesting" as a word implying bottomless curiosity, a prerequisite for anyone wishing to enter the media profession.

Photographing Saffell Street third graders on Career Day is interesting.

Tiptoeing on the side of the highway to get to the scene of a car accident is interesting.

And The Anderson News is interesting.

You may not always agree (especially on the editorial pages).

The paper may even make you angry.

But it's always interesting.

So happy anniversary, Anderson County. It's been interesting, and I know you'll continue to be interesting (in a good way) for weeks and months to come.

The council is expected to complete principal selection training June 3, and will hold a special called meeting June 4 to “analyze the surveys and revise the criteria for selection, revise the interview questions based on the criteria, review the list of applicants and determine which to interview,” according to the news release, followed by candidate interviews and evaluations.

Meet The Anderson News' summer photography intern

From staff reports

Bria Granville, a 20-year-old Western Kentucky University junior, joined The Anderson News staff May 22 as the newspaper's 2013 Kentucky Press Association photography intern.

Granville, who lives in Georgetown, will be working with editorial staff for the next 10 weeks covering the people, places and events of Anderson County.

Majoring in photojournalism with a minor in sociology, Granville said she would like to work with a non-profit organization as a photojournalist after college.

"I hope to gain knowledge and understanding and experience on a professional newspaper staff in order to learn how the news world works," Granville said of her goals for the summer internship.

Though this is Granville's first newspaper internship, she has experience photographing and producing multimedia stories such as a family who adopted five children of different races and a story of a child with a severe disability.

She said she finds inspiration in photojournalists like New York Times Todd Heisler, the journalist responsible for the paper's "One in 8 Million" series.

"I think that it really inspires me to really work on multimedia. It's put together really well and beautifully; it's very detailed," Granville said. "The way he does the audio: you don't need anything but the person's voice. The person's voice carries you through the story."

When she's not taking photos, Granville said she enjoys spending time with her family and volunteering with Public Achievement, a program where students visit an elementary school for a year and teach students about social responsibility.

If readers have ideas for photo series or multimedia projects about Anderson County, please contact Granville at 502-839-6906, ext. 32, or e-mail her at bgranville@theandersonnews.com.

Scales for recycling center put on hold

Magistrates switch health plan to avoid large Obamacare increase

By Ben Carlson
News staff

An effort to install scales at the county's recycling center was put on hold last Tuesday when magistrates tabled the issue due to the absence of vacationing Magistrate David Ruggles.

They also got an inside look at the impact Obamacare will have on county government, its employees and even inmates.

Ruggles, who chairs the fiscal court's solid waste committee, has spoken in favor of installing scales at the recycling center and charging several cents per pound for those who dump nearly everything but household trash into a compactor there.

Judge-Executive John Wayne Conway sought a motion last Tuesday to purchase a set of scales, but found no one willing to make the motion without first hearing more from Ruggles.

Magistrate Kenny Barnett instead spoke against installing scales.

"I don't think so," he said. "We used to have Anderson County cleanup [where the county offered curbside pickup of unwanted materials]. We've still got people who complain about not having that.

"I think people need a place to take it, and [the way it's being done] has got to be cheaper than us picking it up."

"I think we need it," said Magistrate Juretta Wells.

Magistrate Forrest Dale Stevens questioned how much the scales would cost.

"Mercer County put them in for $54,000," replied Conway.

Barnett then questioned if the 3 to 4 cents per pound Ruggles previously suggested would "pay for the scales in 18 months?"

"I don't think that's what he was saying," Conway said. "All [Ruggles] was trying to do is provide a service," Conway said, adding that several contractors, who currently are not allowed to dump building materials at the recycling center, said they will gladly use the local facility if they can because it will save them driving to the dump in Franklin County.

Ruggles has said previously that installing the scales will help which is scheduled for 9 a.m. June 4.

Obamacare gets real Magistrates made some suggested changes to the health insurance plan that covers county employees just months after putting it in place.

Bob Davies, who represents the county's insurer through the Kentucky Association of Counties (KACo), said with Obamacare [named after the president's controversial Affordable Care Act] kicking in next year, KACo has had to change its plan sponsor or realize a $38,000 increase to the county's premium.

"We've got to change plans," Davies said.

The fiscal court complied, and will likely now be able to hold premiums at the level budgeted for when the policy was renewed in March.

In her report to the cover the cost of emptying the large compactor that is provided as a free service to county residents.

He said one argument against charging to dump is that doing so will add to the amount of debris dumped alongside back roads.

Ruggles rejected that argument, saying those now dumping on roadsides could get rid of the materials for free at the recycling center, and that charging isn't going to change that.

The matter was tabled until the fiscal court's next meeting,

"We used to have Anderson County cleanup [where the county offered curbside pickup of unwanted materials]. We've still got people who complain about not having that. I think people need a place to take it, and [the way it's being done] has got to be cheaper than us picking it up."

Health board approves flat tax rate, fewer furlough hours for employees

By Ben Carlson
News staff

With the specter of the fiscal court approving a tax rate increase looming over its head, the Anderson County Board of Health voted unanimously recently to keep its tax rate flat.

Fresh off being informed by County Attorney Bobbi Jo Lewis that the fiscal court would have to vote to include its rate on property tax bills, health board members battled around several rate increase options, including raising the tax rate from 30 cents per $1,000 in assessed property value to 40 cents.

Following a discussion by board chairman Steve Carmichael about raising the rate to 35 cents per $1,000, board member Keith Klink asked Judge-Executive John Wayne Conway if he thought the fiscal court would approve that much of an increase.

"They won't approve it," Conway said. "I can't speak for the each magistrate, but the majority won't do it."

Board members also approved the department's budget for the coming fiscal year, which included cutting furlough hours for staff from three hours each week to one and a half.

That measure passed 5-2, with board members Mark Tussey and Klink voting no.

Health Director Tim Wright cautioned the board before the votes that without a rate increase, the department will likely have around $105,000 in its reserve funds at the conclusion of the coming budget year.

Conway at one point appeared to question Wright's figures.

"That should come in as more," Conway said of the surplus. "I know how he's figured this and how he should have figured it."

"Those are real numbers, judge," Wright countered.

"So are mine," Conway said.

The disagreement appeared to be over revenue the department didn't receive in the current year from Kentucky Spirit, a Medicaid provider that has refused payments to health departments across the state.

Wright said Kentucky Spirit owes his department around $200,000, $60,000 of which would have to be turned over the state government for Medicaid match.

If the department receives that amount of money in the coming year from whichever Medicaid provider takes Kentucky Spirit's place, the $140,000 in revenue missed during the current year would be replaced, boosting Wright's forecasted surplus from $105,000 to $245,000.

During the meeting, Tussey led the charge against increasing the tax rate, and lobbied against restoring furlough hours for the time being.

"I've made no secret that I'd auction off the big screen TVs and furniture in here before I'd raise taxes," Tussey said.

Carmichael countered that a rate increase to 35 cents would make the department more fiscally stable.

"The difference is 83 cents [in property taxes] a month," he said. "That's a Coke at McDonald's a week."

"That's just one part of the tax bill," Tussey countered, "and these things compound on each other. I have a lot of heartburn over raising taxes in a recession, if not a depression. I've never seen so many foreclosures in my life."

Tussey also lobbied to keep furlough days intact until the board has a chance to see how the coming year shapes up financially.

"Across all industries we're seeing wage freezes or wages going down," Tussey said.

Board member Don Wells asked Wright how many of his employees would leave the department if the furloughs remained intact.

"Four," Wright said.

"How many are you confident will do that?" asked Wells.

"Three," said Wright.

fiscal court, Jailer Joani Clark told magistrates that inmates who spend more than 23 hours in a hospital bed will automatically be enrolled in Obamacare, starting next year.

Inmate labor drying up

Clark, the jailer, also said the practice of bringing inmates brought to Anderson County to work has largely ceased.

She said there simply aren't enough inmates available at the Shelby County Detention Center due to state policies that hold few behind bars.

Conway, the judge-executive, said the inmates were largely used for county park maintenance and at the recycling center. Not having them, he said, has forced him to budget more money into both categories.

"It costs $2,500 a month in gas and salaries to go get the inmates," Conway said. "We'll pay $7.25 an hour for temporary help to mow grass."

Conway said he also added about $20,000 in the proposed county budget to pay additional help at the recycling center.

Library board approves $1.357 million budget

Trustees fear getting ‘slayed’ by newspaper over pay increase

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

Library board trustees approved a $1.357 million budget for the upcoming fiscal year after heated debate over giving a 2 percent raise for applicable library staff.

Board members voted 4-0, with library board president Bryan Proctor abstaining from the final vote.

Library Director Pam Mullins advocated for a 2 percent salary raise for her staff — those who have completed a full year of service — by July 1, an increase she said would amount to roughly 50 cents more an hour per person.

Including the 2 percent salary raise, the library's personnel expenses for next fiscal year totals $570,600, a $2,000 increase from 2012-2013.

Library staff last received a 2 percent raise in 2011, according to Mullins.

“Our finances are healthy, and I think they’ve [library employees] performed their duties well,” Mullins said.

Other board members expressed concerns about the public's perception of the library if staff received pay raises.

“I think with the current climate, I think you’re going to kill yourself publicly,” board member Katie Hutton said. “It’ll be the headline.”

“We’re going to lose no matter what we do, as we always do,” Kennedy said, adding that the library would get “slayed” by the newspaper because of the board's decision to give staff raises.

Trustee Jane Bentley Scott said that it didn't matter, saying library staff has “stepped up and worked hard.”

“I think it's common decency to pay people what they're worth if you can,” she said.

Mullins agreed.

“For some of our employees, it will make a difference,” she said.

After trustees voted to approve the salary increase, Mullins addressed the board.

“On behalf of the staff, I thank you,” she said.

To reflect the 2 percent pay raise, the 2013-2014 library budget was changed slightly to allocate about $311,900 to the capital outlay-construction fund.

The capital outlay fund does not represent an amount set aside solely for future building construction or expansion, Mullins said.

Kennedy

The fund represents the amount used to pay the library's 2005 building loan payment and would be used in the upcoming year to purchase furniture, computers, and offset other capital outlay expenses, according to Mullins.

About $86,000 would go directly to capital outlay, she said, and roughly $225,000 to $247,000 would be set aside for the construction fund.

When asked if the library board plans to pursue construction in the upcoming year, Mullins said during an April library board meeting that she would recommend not moving forward with construction or renovation for the library pending litigation.

“My plan is that we not consider construction for next fiscal year,” Mullins said during the April board meeting as trustees discussed hearing presentations from possible expansion architects.

Lawrenceburg resident Harold Todd recently filed a class action lawsuit on the behalf of taxpayers calling for thousands, if not millions, of dollars in refunds from Anderson Public Library.

The lawsuit claims the library has been illegally setting its tax rate since it was first formed by petition in 1967, and that the library should be forced to obey KRS 173.790 and roll back to its 1967 tax rate of 25 cents per $1,000 assessed value.

The library's current tax rate is 86 cents per $1,000, which last year generated approximately $750,000 in revenue for the library, according to an Anderson News article about the lawsuit.

A rate of 25 cents would generate about $218,000, meaning taxpayers would be owed a refund of about $530,000, according to the lawsuit.

Board members hear first architect presentation

Architects from the firm 5253 Design Group of Louisville gave a presentation to board members regarding the firm's work if trustees should choose to move forward with building renovation or expansion.

The library board did not compensate architects for their time in giving the presentation.

Given the library's “local issues,” 5253 Design Group architect Chris Cottongim said the first step for the library may be to conduct a feasibility study, which would include a floor plan, planning and zoning requirements, systematic site plan, program plan, renderings and 3-D models, potential budget and schedule, and a survey.

If the library chose to work with 5253 Design Group, a feasibility study would cost $8,000 and take anywhere from two to six months to complete.

Library Director Pam Mullins and other trustees requested to view copies of the architecture firm's completed feasibility study for the Spencer County library, one of its clients.

The library board will be hearing a second presentation from an architecture firm during its June 18 meeting at 6 p.m.

No action was taken during the architects' presentation.

Friends of the Library to move forward with portable building

The Friends of the Library, a non-profit organization, approached library board trustees during their May 21 meeting to request a space on the library's campus for a 16-foot by 36-foot storage building.

The Friends of the Library recently learned it would no longer be able to meet and operate out of the Old Glensboro School building, located on Broadway on the Anderson County High School campus.

The organization is still looking for a meeting place, Friends of the Library treasurer Julie Mink said, but wanted to approach the library board to see if the library campus had room for their portable storage building.

The “storage and sales cottage,” would hold books and other materials and be purchased entirely from Friends of the Library funds, Mink said.

The building will cost between $8,000-9,000, she said.

Because of its proximity to the library, the building would also allow the Friends of the Library to host more book sales in the future.

The library board unanimously approved the Friends of the Library's request to move a storage building onto the library's property if the Friends of the Library are unable to find a more permanent solution.

Mink said the Friends of the Library plan to spend the next two to four weeks looking for a new space, and will be moving out of the old Glensboro school location by August.

‘Armed and dangerous’ Anderson County man captured by Lexington police

Lexington police arrested an Anderson County man, described by federal marshals as “armed and dangerous,” earlier this month after he was accidentally released from the Fayette County Detention Center.

Police arrested Rodney Dewayne Bell, 28, of Anderson County on May 16 at about midnight and was returned to Fayette County Detention Center, according to a Lexington Herald-Leader news report.

Bell, described by federal marshals as “armed and dangerous,” had been jailed for a short time at the Shelby County Detention Center after being arrested for drug charges in Anderson County, according to a Landmark news report on April 10.

According to the report, Bell was transferred to Fayette County Detention Center after he incurred a warrant for contempt of court in failing to pay a fine.

Officials released Bell April 3 after he posted a $1,000 bond, but discovered about three days later that Bell possessed outstanding charges from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (ATF).

According to an April release from the Fayette County Detention Center, Bell had been under a federal holder and marshals considered him armed and dangerous.

Fayette jail officials said the accidental release occurred because of a miscommunication with transfer documents, according to a press release.

A Fayette County jail spokeswoman was contacted several times for comment, but did not respond to phone calls as of press time.

Parlez-vous francais? At high school, not any more

Students lobby to keep French after site-based council axes program

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

Limited staff allocation funds led the Anderson County High School site-based decision-making council to say “au revoir” to offering French to students for the upcoming school year.

According to Anderson County High School Principal Ronnie Fields, the high school needs 180 students to sign up for French in order to justify hiring an instructor for a part-time position.

Only 141 students enrolled in French language courses for the upcoming school year, Fields said via e-mail.

High school students will be able to finish French language coursework for the next year through online classes provided by the high school, he said, but no other French language courses would be offered.

Kacy Ripy, an Anderson County High School student and French Club member, stressed the importance of learning from an in-classroom teacher versus online courses during a special-called meeting of the site-based decision-making council last Thursday.

Ripy and several French Club members had also petitioned the Board of Education during its May 20 meeting to keep the high school's French program.

Although students may be able to take online courses, Ripy said she didn't think online classes would be the best way to learn the language.

“The French program means a lot to us,” Ripy said. “Learning from a computer is not the best idea.”

“In education, if we had unlimited resources, we'd want to be able to offer Spanish, French, Chinese.”

—Ronnie Fields
High school principal

Ripy told Fields that the French Club would even donate its activity funds, about $900, to help hire a part-time French instructor.

Fields said he wasn't sure if the French Club would be legally allowed to contribute its funds for hiring purposes, but that he would check into the matter. State law governs how students can use activity funds, Fields said.

“In education, if we had unlimited resources, we'd want to be able to offer Spanish, French, Chinese,” Fields, a former French student when he was a student at Anderson County High School, said.

Each school in the district receives a lump sum of funds for staffing, Fields said, and the council chose to allocate funds for a reading coach/intervention-ist, a position to which Fields attributed the high school's solid ACT reading scores.

“I find it difficult to justify making a significant change in that [hiring a reading coach], given the circumstances,” teacher and site-based council member Jim Beward said.

The council unanimously approved to hire a reading coach/interventionist for the upcoming fall and to re-examine hiring a French language instructor if funds were available through reallocation. Additional funds for reallocation may be available once average daily attendance (ADA) numbers were calculated after the first month of the new school year.

“I think they're both important positions,” teacher and site-based council member Drew Robinson said. “With having limited resources, it's a tough decision either way.”

Spanish will be the only foreign language course offered at Anderson County High School for the 2013-2014 school year.

Three Mercer County men busted for allegedly being meth ‘smurfs’

From staff reports

Three Mercer County residents are scheduled to be arraigned May 30 on charges that they were supplying cold pills to be used to manufacture methamphetamine, according to documents on file in Anderson District Court.

Known by police as “smurfing,” the activity typically involves methamphetamine “cooks” paying others to purchase ingredients used to make drug.

Charged are Justin Arnold, 29, of 458 Lynn Dr., Harrodsburg; Nathan Hurt, 26, of 4039 Bohon Road, Harrodsburg; and Justin Ransdell, 20, of 645 Stratton Road, Salvisa, according to court documents.

All three are charged with unlawful distribution of a methamphetamine precursor. Arnold is also charged with driving under the influence (second offense), no seat belt and possession of marijuana.

Ransdell is also charged with endangering the welfare of a minor, who police say was in the vehicle when it was stopped on Chautauqua Street in Lawrenceburg by Lawrenceburg Police officer Clay Crouch.

In his report, Crouch said he stopped the vehicle after seeing those inside not wearing seatbelts and a child not properly restrained.

He searched the vehicle and found two boxes of pseudoephedrine, marijuana and a glass smoking device, according to his report.

Crouch said Arnold told him that he was to receive $25 plus $10 in gas money in exchange for the cold pills.

All three were transported to the Shelby County Detention Center. Arnold was held on $2,500 cash bond. Hurst and Ransdell were released on their own recognizance, according to court documents.

Eighth graders make voices heard

By Bria Granville
News staff

Anissa Davis and Lisa Petrey-Kirk have caused quite a stir in front of the Anderson County Courthouse over the last decade.

Both eighth grade teachers at Anderson County Middle school have been teaching their students the importance of standing up for their civil rights.

At the end of each school year the students make their voices heard and take a trip to the courthouse dressed in their best impressions of 1960s social activists, to protest for a cause they believe in.

"The kids need to know their rights and this is a hands on way for them to understand and protect their rights," said Davis, an accelerated language arts teacher.

The students prepared for their protest for a month before heading to the courthouse by researching a group topic of their choice.

If Christians are bigots, so are gay marriage supporters

The cultural tide is shifting and one need not earn a degree in sociology to see this taking place. In his book, "Culture Shift: The Battle for the Moral Heart of America" Dr. R. Albert Mohler Jr. notes that, "ominous signs of moral collapse and cultural decay now appear on our contemporary horizon. A society ready to put the institution of marriage up for demolition and transformation is a society losing its most basic moral sense."

This summer will bring with it new insight on how much further our culture will move away from the basic moral compass that has guided it for the last 236 years.

Brian Owens
Faith columnist

The Supreme Court is expected to rule next month on two cases concerning so-called gay "marriage." Just this week, the iconic Boy Scouts of America voted to allow openly gay members into its ranks.

Along with this sweeping moral shift is how evangelical Christians are being addressed in the public square. When one expresses his or her belief in biblical standards of morality and human sexuality, they are often classified as a bigot. This pejorative term has now been reserved for those of us who believe the Bible is the sole authority in all matters of faith and practice. But what exactly does it mean?

According to the Oxford Dictionary of English, bigotry is defined as "having or revealing an obstinate belief in the superiority of one's own opinions and a prejudiced intolerance of the opinions of others." Obstinacy is simply a negative way of describing one who is determined that what they believe is the truth.

We used to admire those who were resolute in their beliefs as this was an indication of strong character; such is the case today, unless you hold to a biblical definition of marriage and God's plan for human sexuality, then you're a bigot.

However, thinking about this aforementioned definition, wouldn't it be considered bigotry to call someone else a bigot for holding to his or her system of belief? After all, do not proponents of so-called gay "marriage" believe that their opinion is superior to mine? Are not those who seek to normalize homosexual behavior determined in their cause? One could even say that many of them are intolerant of the opinions of others with whom they disagree, seeking to have them silenced. What happened to freedom of speech, civil discourse and simply agreeing to disagree?

Charles Haddon Spurgeon once said that "Swelling words have been spoken and great attempts taken in hand to renovate society, but you can never renovate society till you have renovated the individual members who compose society."

Therefore Christians cannot continue to stick their heads in the proverbial sand; not while the moral ground is giving way all around our necks. We must seek to lovingly engage our friends and family with the life-changing gospel of Jesus Christ.

Shouting matches and picket lines will not change hearts. We cannot allow the world to speak for us. We must proclaim the same message that changed our hearts as it is the only message that will change our neighbor's heart. We must "preach Christ crucified, a stumbling block to Jews and folly to Gentiles, but to those who are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God." (1 Corinthians 1:23-24) The world may call us bigots, but let's call on them to repent and believe the gospel.

Calvinistic Theology (Part 2) – Total Inability

Calvinism teaches that man is totally unable to save himself because of his nature; he is corrupt because of Adam's fall. "By this sin (eating of the forbidden fruit) they (our first parents) fell from their original righteousness and communion with God, and so became dead in sin, and wholly defiled in all the faculties and parts of soul and body. They being the root of all mankind, the guilt of this sin was imputed and the same death is sin and corrupted nature conveyed to all their posterity descending from them by ordinary generation. From this original corruption, whereby we are utterly indisposed, disabled, and made opposite to all good, and wholly inclined to all evil, do proceed all actual transgressions" (From the Presbyterian Confession of Faith as quoted by T. W. Brent - The Gospel Plan of Salvation.)

The Bible teaches: 1. Salvation is for all who believe and obey the gospel (Titus 2:11). Salvation is limited to those who are willing to obey, but is available to all (Matt. 28:18-20; Mark 16:16; John 3:16; Acts 2:38). 2. Death is passed upon all men, for all have sinned. The Bible does not teach inherited sin.

Paul wrote Romans 5:12 -- All have sinned - Rom 3:23.

None are totally depraved. In the parable of the Sower, the word fell on the hearts of mankind (Luke 8:5-15).

None in the parable were totally depraved. One even had a good heart (vs. 15). Learning and believing the word is what saves a person from THEIR sins.

Anderson County baseball coach L. W. Barnes encourages his team during the late going of last week's district tournament game with Collins. Despite a subpar record, this year's Anderson team should be remembered for its resilience and improvement.

Bearcat record belies strides made in dire conditions

Working this craft as long as I have - 28 years - teaches some truths that will never be part of the class syllabus in Journalism 101.

For that matter, you won't even find it in graduate level courses. Unless, of course, the major is life lessons.

One of the oddities of high school athletics is that some of the best coaches never make it to their sport's biggest stage. Obviously, that is not always true, but it happens more than the average fan realizes. Part of it deals with sheer numbers. Part of it is demographics of a school district. Part of it is luck.

And part of it is simply the cyclical nature of high school sports. Programs have "up" periods and "down" ones. No one can really explain why. It just happens.

Sometimes, luck and cycles come together when a team is "up" and most of the strongest rivals are "down."

That brings us to the job L.W. Barnes and his Anderson County baseball team did in 2013.

There won't be any banners commemorating the 10-19 season that ended last week. Collins squeaked out a 1-0 win over the Bearcats in the 30th District Tournament semifinal, marking the first time since 1998 that Anderson baseball did not survive the district tournament.

The banners are usually reserved for regional champions. Since returning to his alma mater in 1999, Barnes' teams have hung four of them, more regional titles than any coach in any single-class sport at Anderson County.

But no one should ever forget the job Barnes, his assistants and his players did in 2013. It might be the best coaching job he's pulled off at Anderson. And there have been some good ones.

Back in 1999, Barnes took on the challenge of leading a program that had not won a regional tournament game in 16 years. That spring, Anderson won the district tournament for the first time in 11 years - when Barnes was a high school student - and advanced to the regional semifinal.

The following season, Anderson County, a school with almost no tradition in baseball, won the Eighth Region.

Three years later, Barnes and the Bearcats pulled it off again. They weren't supposed to either time.

In 2008 and 2009, Anderson was supposed to win and the Bearcats did so convincingly.

But I am not sure the progress those teams made from Feb. 15, the traditional start of practice, to the final day of the season, equaled that of the 2013 Bearcats. I can guarantee you

Curry, Vest power Anderson past Walton-Verona

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Fireworks aren't just for the Fourth of July.

At least, that was the case around Anderson County softball Monday afternoon.

Bailey Curry and Alissa Vest both belted Memorial Day home runs and the Lady Bearcat speed manufactured at least five runs as Anderson routed visiting Walton-Verona, 10-3, in the first round of the Eighth Region Tournament.

Curry's home run, a two-run shot in the third inning, put the Lady Bearcats firmly in control, 6-2. Vest's blast was more along the line of a grand finale. Leading 8-3, Vest lofted a fly ball that just cleared the right-center field fence and prompted the Anderson faithful that made up most of the overflow crowd to make plans for Tuesday's semi-final showdown with regional favorite Oldham County.

It was the third time in the last four years that Anderson advanced to the regional semifinals. Anderson has now advanced at least that far in post-season play nine of the last 13 seasons.

"We have been (Vest) to swing at good pitches," Anderson coach Brian Glass said with a smile. "She got a good one and she did what she is supposed to do."

Which is basically what

the entire Anderson team did after a shaky first inning. The Lady Bearcats pounded the ball, created havoc on the base paths and saw pitchers Mia Aldridge and Ally Moore scatter six hits but give up only two earned runs.

Aldridge, who had been nothing short of outstanding over the last month, went the first four innings, getting the win. Moore closed things out, answering questions about a tender finger, injured just before the district final four days earlier.

State Tournament info

The Eighth Region Softball Tournament was to have played its semi-final round Tuesday after Anderson News press deadlines with the championship game scheduled for tonight, May 29.

The Eighth Region champion will play the Sixth Region winner in the first round of the state tournament on Thursday, June 6, at Jack Fisher Park in Owensboro. First pitch is set for 8 p.m., Eastern time.

The state tournament is scheduled to be played June 6-8. If Anderson County is fortunate to make it to the state, ticket information and a full schedule will appear in the June 5 edition of The Anderson News.

Collins' Sanders drives in game winner in ninth

SHELBYVILLE - It looked like a good pitch.

It WAS a good pitch.

Two were out in the bottom of the ninth and Anderson County's Josh Brown had 1-2 count on Collins' Dan Sanders.

Somehow, though, Sanders got his bat on a fastball, dropping a soft line drive into right field to score Mason Jeffries and give Collins a 1-0 walk-off win over Anderson County in the 30th District semifinal game at Shelby County Athletic Complex last Tuesday.

"We told (Brown) that we felt he called a good pitch," Anderson coach L.W. Barnes said. "The hitter hadn't looked good on the previous fastballs and the kid just put a good swing on a good pitch. Brown has nothing to hold his head down about."

It was one of those regular idiosyncracies of the diamond that ended one of the most irregular seasons in Anderson County baseball history.

The Bearcats, who were hoping for their third straight district championship, instead went out in the district opener. Anderson's record will only show 10 wins in 29 games.

Yet, it took two extra innings for the Bearcats to finally go down against the state's 11th-ranked team.

Those who had followed Anderson's journey since practice commenced in February really weren't surprised.

They knew the numbers were deceiving. Anderson hosted just two home games and had only one practice on the home field before the final week of the season. Rain played havoc with nearly every school's schedule during the 2013 campaign, but with a newly renovated field, the Bearcats were more vulnerable to wet grounds than most.

Anderson County Middle School student Alorra Sims had a huge day at the state middle school track meet, held Saturday at the University of Louisville.

An eighth grader, Sims scored 21 of Anderson County's 25 points to put the Lady Mustangs among the state's best with an eighth-place team finish.

Sims won the triple jump competition with an effort of 33-feet-10.5-inches. She also placed second in the long jump with a leap of 15-11.50. Sims also placed sixth in the 100-meter hurdles with time of 17.50.

Seventh grader Elle Buser was the only other Anderson County performer to score, coming in fifth in the 800-meter run at 2:32.77.

one back to Moore, the freshman reared back to close things out.
“I wanted to pitch both of them,” Glass said. “We are going to have to use both of them. Mia has been pitching lights out, but we have lots of confidence in both of them.”
Aldridge struggled at first, giving up a pair of doubles and two runs, one coming when shortstop Corrin Robinson overthrew first on Wassem’s ground ball.
Anderson got the runs back in the bottom of the inning when Molly Burkhead led off with a walk, then scored on Curry’s one-out double. Courtesy runner Trista Craigmyle stole third base, then came home on Kaci Currens’ ground out.
The Lady Bearcats put things away in the third when Aldridge singled, Burkhead beat out a bunt for a hit. Missa Walker then laid down another bunt, prompting Wassem, fielding at third, to throw wildly to first.
Aldridge and Burkhead scored before Curry drove an 0-2 pitch well over the fence in center field to make it 6-2. For all practical purposes, it was over.
“Our speed played a huge part in this win,” Glass said. Anderson also used small ball to plate a run in the fourth when Katelyn Harrod doubled, then Craigmyle, pinch running, stole third. Walton-Verona catcher Emily Quatkemeyer made a good throw to third. Her problem was no one was covering the bag. Craigmyle strolled home as the throw went to the outfield.
It was almost a repeat in the fifth when Walker singled, stole second, went to third on a ground out, then scored when she delayed her break on Currens’ sacrifice bunt.
Walton-Verona aided the Lady Bearcats with two errors and misplaying several fly balls that might have been catchable.
Glass had been concerned, even though his team, which improved to 25-11, was heavily favored.
“Absolutely,” said Glass, who had not seen Walton-Verona play. “We knew their pitcher (Hannah Thacker) had thrown some good games and was capable of shutting us down.”
Walton-Verona also suffered a bad break when first baseman Julann Ginn was hurt as she stretched for a throw to end the second inning. Ginn, who doubled in her only at-bat, had been in the three-spot in the lineup.
But with Walton-Verona’s big bat silenced, Anderson’s fireworks were more than enough.
“I don’t think we came out with the focus and the intensity like we should have in the first inning,” Glass said. “After that, we calmed down and played well.”

that no team has improved under circumstances as unbelievably trying as this year’s team.
A newly renovated field wasn’t ready until the final week of the regular season. Anderson played two games at home, won them both, and prompted a running joke, “We are undefeated at home.”
There was a stretch where the Bearcats lost 12 of 14 games. Things could have imploded. Somehow, Anderson got better.
As upsetting as it might have been to not have a home game until the last week of the season, the real issue was not practicing. I challenge anyone, any sport, to get better with no place to practice.
Anderson baseball did.
That last week of the season, Anderson beat Scott County, which had won 21 games going into this week’s 11th Region Tournament, and defending state champ Woodford County, another 20-game winner.
Anderson became very dangerous. So dangerous that the Bearcats had Collins on the ropes numerous times.
That’s coaching and kids responding to it. Last week, Barnes credited Collins pitcher Dan Sanders for a job well done – rightly so, I might add – then put the onus on himself for not being able to manufacture a run.
The critics will point to that, just as they have when some things went awry in the post-season. Every time that happens, it is easy to point fingers when a gamble backfires. If someone wants to criticize at that point, fine, but be fair and give someone his due when things go right.
The 2013 baseball season might go down as the one where more went wrong than at any time in recent memory. The inability to adequately practice was something beyond the control of anyone in the immediate Bearcat family.
Through it all, Barnes remained cool. His frustration with the field issue was obvious but he tried to remain positive. It is the same trait that has made him one of Kentucky’s best high school coaches.
The state of Kentucky might not know about the job L.W. Barnes has done with Anderson baseball. I just hope Anderson County does.

Rain can't keep Lady Bearcats from district title

Anderson overcomes a week of wrongs to win crown

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

A reading of the list of things that went wrong might have taken longer than actually getting the 30th District Softball Tournament championship in.

It almost, repeat, almost, overshadowed the fact that Anderson County captured its second consecutive district title with an 8-6 win over Collins last Thursday.

Weather? Don't make the powers-that-be at Anderson County High School, the tournament host, bang their heads against a brick wall when talking about the weather-plagued affair. The final, originally scheduled for last Tuesday, was postponed about an hour before the scheduled first pitch when afternoon rains left the field unplayable.

Then, after being rescheduled for Thursday night, what had been forecast as scattered showers in the area scattered directly over the Anderson field immediately after the protective tarp had been removed.

Even though further rain held off until after the field could be ready to play again, heavy clouds hung close to the game site and finally released more rain, beginning in the bottom of the fourth inning. Anderson County and Collins played on.

That's not all.

Less than one trip through the batting order, it was obvious that something was not right with Anderson pitcher Allyson Moore. Through seven batters, Moore's normal pinpoint control had given way to three hits and two batters hit by pitches.

Only a spectacular double play, started by shortstop Corrin Robinson, got Anderson out of the first inning unscathed. Moore's classmate, Mia Aldridge came on to pitch the rest of the way and earn a gutty win.

"Ally hurt her hand before the game," Anderson coach Brian Glass said. "I didn't know about it until we took her out. She said a ball hit her on the end of her middle finger. It was purple when she came out of the game."

Aldridge came in with the bases loaded and no outs, but got out of the predicament with three strikeouts. She did walk Lindsay Ketcham to force in Collins' first run, but the damage could have been much worse.

Aldridge showed why her record stood at 13-1 heading to the district with a performance that was sheer will. The freshman scattered seven hits but gave up only two earned runs in what eventually became horrible pitching conditions when the rain re-started.

A pitcher who relies more on changing speeds and hitting the corners more than overpowering the hitter, Aldridge uncharacteristically walked four but found a way to keep the Titans on the short end of the score.

Even after Collins scored twice in the sixth to pull within 7-6, Aldridge battled through, recording a strikeout to end the inning with the tying run at second. Then after seeing Collins get runners at first and third with two out in the seventh, Aldridge retired Collins leadoff hitter Janelle Hynes on a weak pop-up. Hynes had reached base three times in her four previous plate appearances.

"I don't know what I can say about Mia," Glass said. "She is a tough kid. She has nerves of steel."

Bailey Rankin led the Collins attack, going 3-for-3 with two RBI. Shelbi Poehlein went 2-for-4 while DP Hannah Renfro reached base all four plate appearances.

Early, it looked like the Lady Bearcats would cruise, regardless of what went on in the pitching circle.

Kaci Currens and Anna-Marie Hyatt delivered run-scoring singles in the bottom of the first, then the Lady Bearcats erupted for five runs in the second, taking advantage of three Collins errors. Hyatt delivered the big hit again, a two-run double that plated Marissa Walker and Trista Craig-myle, courtesy running for Bailey Curry.

"That hit was huge," Glass said. "When she got that hit, I thought we had all the momentum."

Indeed. While Collins came in with 19 wins, Anderson had beaten the Titans 8-0 in their previous meeting on May 3. After three innings, a similar result not only seemed possible, but probable. Anderson's speed had taken advantage of Collins miscues and the Lady Bearcats looked to be solving Collins pitcher Lauren Shepherd.

Molly Burkhead takes a big cut against Collins in the 30th District final.

Robinson followed Hyatt with another double then scored on an error. By the time Anderson was done in the third, the Lady Bearcats had batted around and led 7-2.

But things were still not right.

"We quit executing," Glass said. "I really don't know why."

Glass did not think the 90-minute starting delay as Glass and his staff got the field dry had much to do with his team's sudden lethargy. Both teams waited things out in Anderson's indoor hitting facility.

"I won't let the team come in flat," Glass said. "I really don't know what happened."

Anderson committed three errors, including two in the fourth when Collins plated two unearned runs. But the real problem was on the base paths where the Lady Bearcats were caught stealing twice, something that had not happened all season.

Both took Anderson out of what could have been big innings.

There were other running miscues that had Glass scratching his head. "We missed three signs," he said. "I really don't understand that."

But Hyatt, who had missed one of those signs, drove in an insurance run in the sixth when she coaxed a bases-loaded walk to drive in Walker with two out. Hyatt watched a 3-2 pitch just miss outside.

"That was a great at-bat," Glass said. "When it is raining like this, we tell the kids to try to work the count. It's harder to pitch. Anna-Marie did a great job."

Hyatt finished with four RBI.

Ever the perfectionist, Glass allowed that a mistake-filled performance in this week's regional tournament will not have a happy ending.

But last Thursday, he was smiling broadly as his team celebrated its second straight 30th District title, its third in four years and the program's sixth in the last 12 seasons.

"I told them it was a great win," he said. "I told them we were not executing offensively and still won the district championship. That is a great win."

DISTRICT

But, in a roundabout way, the Bearcats became tough. Very tough.

Despite being the lowest seed in the four-team tournament, Anderson was dangerous. Collins was so close to learning that last week.

Instead, the Titans went on to claim the school's first district baseball title, beating Spencer County with another walkoff win, 4-3, in the final.

That Collins entered this week's regional tournament as the clear favorite only made Tuesday's loss sting a bit more around Anderson County.

"This has been a very tough season for all involved," Barnes said Wednesday. "I think it definitely drug us down a little during the middle portion of the season. Those last two weeks, we really did turn into a pretty dangerous team. I knew going into (the Collins game) that we had a lot of confidence, and I truly felt we were going to win that game."

Anderson had its chances. Many of them.

The Bearcats stranded eight base runners as Sanders, who also pitched, bore down to get out of jams in the second, fourth, sixth and eighth innings. Then in the ninth, the Bearcats loaded the bases with one out, but reliever Buddy Johnson, who got the win, induced Brice Stockton into a strange-looking 1-2-3 double play.

Of the eight left on base, six were in scoring position and four of those had reached second or third base with less than two outs.

"You have got to give credit to Dan Sanders," Barnes said. "He toughened up when he needed to and I take blame for not pushing a run across.

"I take responsibility because in tight games, great coaches get that 'one' run needed, and I didn't get our guys across the plate. They battled their tails off and I couldn't be more proud."

Barnes tried, though.

Never was it more evident than in the ninth inning when Brown reached on an infield hit with one out. Shae Sparrow followed with a clean single to left, then with Max Crabtree at the plate, Brown moved to third on a passed ball.

With runners at first and third, Barnes tried to coax Collins into a mental mistake. Sparrow broke for second but Johnson threw behind him to Sanders, now playing first. Instead of trying to chase Sparrow, Sanders held the ball to prevent Brown from trying to score. When a multitude of looks from both sides was done, nothing had changed. Anderson had runners still at first and third with one out.

Barnes said the play "was our attempt at getting that run. Both teams executed in that situation well. In that situation, to end up with no runners advancing, that is a win for the defense."

Crabtree walked to load the sacks, but Johnson got Stockton, who had put a charge into a long out to end the seventh, when the Adnerson sophomore hit a weak tapper in front of the plated, Johnson flipped to catcher Zac Wiley, who rifled a throw to Sanders, doubling Stockton.

Barnes turned to Brown after Eliadis let pitching coach Chris Copenhaver know his gas tank was almost empty after eight innings.

Eliadis pitched eight shutout innings. After getting out of a bases-loaded predicament in the first inning, Eliadis was more than up to the task. While he battled control issues at times, walking five, he never allowed a Titan runner past second base after the first inning.

His final pitch ended with Shae Sparrow starting a spectacular twin-killing that went through Brown at second, then finished with Crabtree at first to retire Johnson, Collins' clean-up hitter.

Barnes said the decision to go with the junior lefty was not difficult. "Eliadis has proven himself all year to be an extremely effective pitcher," Barnes explained. "He really only had one bad start all year."

"Brandon just never gave in. He pitched such a gutty game. He has always been very stoic on the mound and he seems to always keep his composure when everything around him is pure chaos. He definitely got tired in the seventh and eighth innings, but he didn't want to come out."

In the ninth, it looked like Brown was going to get through unscathed, even though he walked Austin Perry, who plans to walk on at the University of Kentucky next year, to lead off the inning. Jeffries hit into a fielder's choice, but with David Decker at the plate, Brown unleashed a wild pitch that allowed Jeffries to move to second.

Still, Brown appeared to be getting out of any trouble when he struck out Decker then was ahead of Sanders, 1-2, in the count.

It was one pitch. A good one at that.

Through the tears and stunned looks, the Bearcats learned again that baseball can be a funny, yet very cruel, game.

Flawed elk hunt drawing system needs overhaul

Know boating regulations before hitting the water

Allow me to rant a little about the recent Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife's annual elk "drawing."

As you can probably guess, neither I, nor anyone I know of, as of this writing, was drawn for any of the tags again this year. I vowed before buying a license for the 2013-14 seasons that I would not "donate" another $10 of my hard earned money to a flawed system but I did anyway hoping for one last opportunity after all these years.

Well, I'm going to say it again.....not again. I still favor a points system of some type since I have known people who have been drawn not only once but twice within a three-year period. It also seems that if you know the right people your odds increase for getting drawn for a tag but I'll leave that to the reader's imagination.

I will give credit to the Department for the re-establishment of a herd that now reportedly tops 10,000 elk. It's just a shame that a rotating-type system can't be established to allow the average hunter spending $10 more of a chance to experience the chance to harvest one of these magnificent animals. For what I've spent buying chances over the years for my family and me, I could have had a good start on a trip out west to hunt elk. Guess my $10 for next year's Kentucky elk hunt will go into an "out west" fund rather than the Kentucky draw since I've lost faith in the current system of getting drawn here in the bluegrass.

At least Kentucky is a great place to purchase licenses according to reports. The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources broke the all time record for hunting and fishing license sales this past month. There were over $7 million worth of licenses sold in the month of April. That bodes well for the department since this is their primary source of revenue and they receive no state general fund dollars to operate. Sorry guys, but until the elk draw system is revamped, you'll have to get my annual elk hunt donation from someone else next year.

Boating

It's time. The weather is warm and the local fishing and boating waters are warming up along with it so get ready.

With turkey season closing the middle of May (in West Virginia which Hunter and I managed to harvest four nice birds between us) it seems the getting on the water time has sneaked up on me again this year. We were able to trout fish the last day of our annual track to the West Virginia mountains and pulled a half dozen or so to the bank but recent rains left little bank to work with. The high waters of the local rivers and creeks made for mighty dangerous and nearly impossible trout fishing but the kayakers up that way were out in force. Made me wish I'd taken mine up to join them on the rain swollen rapids.

Locally the rivers and creeks are looking pretty good for fishing and boating. Suzanne's already been asking when we might be getting the canoe or the kayaks on the water. I have got to get out there all I can as she is graduating with the Anderson County High School Class of 2013 on May 30.

Hard to believe how quickly our "babies" have grown up so heed my advice to take them hunting, fishing, boating or just outside and enjoy being with them while you can. Memories can be made that will never be lost.

No matter your mode of transportation on the water, make sure safety is first and foremost. Always make sure your equipment is "sea worthy" before jumping in and shoving out to deep water. Always make sure to wear the proper personal flotation device and that all passengers are also equipped with proper flotation devices. Be sure and review the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources rules and regulations pertaining to boating and fishing before going out on the waterways.

You might be surprised to find that different rules and regulations apply to different sized boats. Some are pretty picky as Hunter and I found out two years ago on Taylorsville Lake while on a bass fishing adventure. We received some "info" from a couple of the game wardens while we were chatting as they reviewed our fishing licenses.

The veteran officer made us aware that the size and color of my boat license numbers were not within the guidelines. They were too small (1 1/2 inches tall) and were also black, which is not enough contrast to the dark blue metal flake Ranger's hide.

I thought it pretty silly since I'd had the boat for 15 years and no other officer had ever noticed. Of course, I didn't tell him that. He told me the numbers and letters that comprise the boat license on both sides of the hull had to be a minimum of two inches in height and of a contrasting color to the hull of the vessel.

No ticket was issued but I guess I still didn't believe it until I got back to the truck and Hunter and I looked it up in the annual boating guide. Sure enough the officer was spot on and I was appreciative of the "info" and not a ticket. I also, made it a point to purchase new number and letter stickers that were two inches and white and had them on the boat before hitting the lake the next weekend.

Always check the hunting, trapping, fishing and boating regulations that are provided online or the free published booklets the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources puts out before going on your next adventure. Be safe and enjoy God's great outdoors.

Take a kid hunting and fishing soon. See ya outside!

It's catfish time in the Commonwealth

By Art Lander, Jr.
Ky. Dept. of Fish & Wildlife Resources

When water temperatures warm into the 70s, it's catfish time across Kentucky.

"Late May and June is the prime time for catching catfish from reservoirs, small lakes, rivers and farm ponds," said Gerry Buynak, assistant director of fisheries at the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "The spawn is underway and with the onset of warmer weather, catfish settle into daily patterns. They begin to feed aggressively at dawn and dusk and throughout the night."

The top three catfish species sought by anglers in Kentucky include the channel catfish, the blue catfish and the flathead catfish:

The channel catfish (Ictalurus punctatus) is the most widely distributed catfish species in Kentucky. It thrives in ponds and small lakes. It has a bluish-silver back, white belly and silvery sides with small, irregular dark spots. Adults are commonly 12 to 20 inches long.

"Each year almost 200,000 channel catfish are stocked in Kentucky waters," said Buynak. "At the end of May, we'll be putting channel catfish in 27 of our FINs (Fishing in Neighborhoods) lakes."

To catch channel catfish, an angler must fish on the bottom. That's because channel catfish are scavengers, using their super-sensitive whiskers to detect the odors of food on the bottom.

Use the basic slip sinker rig - a No. 2 hook, leader, barrel swivel and egg sinker - for bottom fishing. Night crawlers, shrimp, chicken liver or scented dough are excellent channel catfish baits.

The blue catfish (Ictalurus furcatus) thrives in big rivers such as the lower Ohio and Mississippi rivers, as well as their major tributaries. Blue catfish are also found in Lake Barkley and Kentucky Lake. In the last decade blue catfish have been successfully established in several small lakes and four major reservoirs -- Taylorsville Lake, Barren River Lake, Dewey Lake and Fish-trap Lake.

The blue catfish is similar in appearance to the channel catfish. The most obvious difference is that the blue catfish has a straight anal fin. The blue catfish is bluish-gray with silvery sides and a white belly. The tail is deeply forked.

To target blue catfish in small lakes, use a bobber to keep the bait suspended about 6-8 feet below the surface. The best bait for blue catfish is cut bait, such as the viscera and gills of gizzard shad, chunks of bluegill, or pieces of minnow.

The flathead catfish

(Pylodictis olivaris) is primarily found in large rivers and reservoirs.

It is brown to reddish-brown to yellowish with dark blotches on the top and sides, with a yellowish to white belly. It has a wide, flat head, a triangular-shaped tail and a protruding lower jaw.

Flatheads commonly reach 36 inches and can live for 20 years. Adults are solitary and inhabit deep, sluggish pools during the day. They move into rocky shallows at night, often locating around cover. They eat live fish such as creek chubs, shiners, shad and sunfish.

Anglers should use a slip sinker rig with a small foam float attached to the leader. Hook the baitfish through the tail to keep it from snagging on the bottom.

Catfish in Kentucky are big, abundant and found throughout the state. Now is time to start fishing for them.

Free fishing opportunities abound this weekend

DARE Fishing Derby set, events planned across the state

From staff reports

Families can take a free test drive of fishing fun during the first weekend of June.

Kentucky celebrates free fishing weekend across the state June 1-2. It's been an annual event since at least 1992.

Moms, dads, grandparents, extended family and out-of-state visitors all can sample Kentucky's fishing opportunities without having to buy a license or permit during this weekend. Size and creel limits on the number of fish that anglers may keep still apply, however. Anglers may keep trout without possessing a trout permit during free fishing weekend.

With special events across the state planned for Saturday, June 1, most families can find fishing opportunities just a short drive away. A number of events are geared toward kids under the age of 16. Several include a free hot dog lunch, bait and loaner fishing equipment for anglers.

Families wanting the fun to last the entire weekend should consider a state park stay - Kentucky has a number of parks situated at prime fishing lakes. Find out more online at: parks.ky.gov.

The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources also stocks 39 community lakes across the state as part of its Fishing in Neighborhoods (FINs) program. Most of these lakes received a stocking of channel catfish this month. To find the nearest lake, go online to fw.ky.gov then click onto the FINs logo on the right hand side of the page.

Some of nearby fishing events planned for June 1 include:

Anderson County: Anderson County Sheriff's Department D.A.R.E. Fishing Derby, Hope Community Church, 5930 U.S. 127 South, Lawrenceburg. Fishing from 8 a.m. to 11 a.m. For kids under the age of 16; open for adults later in morning. Special stocking of catfish. Lunch provided. Anglers should bring own fishing equipment

Franklin County: Family fishing day, Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources' main campus, 1 Sportsman's Lane, Frankfort. Lower lake will remain open during daylight hours for all anglers throughout the weekend. Upper lake will close to fishing Friday, May 31, except that anglers 15 and under may fish in the lake from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. Upper lake open for youth fishing only from 7 a.m. to 11 a.m. Saturday, June 1. The lake will reopen to all anglers after 11 a.m. Both lakes will receive special stockings of catfish and hybrid bluegill. Anglers should bring fishing equipment and bait.

Keep safety in mind as Kentucky's recreational boating season launches

By Art Lander, Jr.
Ky. Dept. of Fish & Wildlife Resources

The just completed Memorial Day holiday served as the unofficial start of recreational boating season in Kentucky.

Boating safety officials with the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources are urging everyone who plans to be on the water to keep safety in mind. About 90 percent of all boating accident victims die as a result of drowning.

"Wearing a life jacket is the most important step you can take to keep you and your family safe on the water," said Zac Campbell, boating education administrator for the department's Division of Law Enforcement. "Your odds of surviving an unintentional fall overboard with a life jacket on are substantially higher. Just remember your life jacket's got your back."

Conservation officers will be out in full force patrolling the state's lakes and rivers, watching for impaired boaters and checking vessels for required safety equipment.

Boaters are most often written up for expired boat registration, not enough life jackets on board, boating under the influence, going too fast in an idle speed only zone or having no fire extinguisher on board.

Boaters should also remember that youths ages 12 to 17 must have a valid Kentucky boater education card to operate a boat or personal watercraft of 10 horsepower or more.

For complete information on boating regulations, safety requirements and boat operation, consult the 2013-14 Kentucky Fishing and Boating Guide, available wherever fishing licenses are sold. The guide also is available online at fw.ky.gov.

MASTER COMMISSIONER'S SALE
In order to comply with the orders of the Anderson Circuit Court, the Master Commissioner will sell the property described in the following actions on Thursday, May 30, 2013, at 11:00 a.m. in the Anderson County Courthouse, Lawrenceburg, Kentucky. The property shall be sold to raise the amounts herein-after set forth, together with interest and the costs of this action, and upon the following terms and conditions (unless otherwise indicated):

(1) At the time of the sale, the successful bidder shall either pay cash or make a deposit of ten percent (10%) of the purchase price, with the balance on credit for thirty (30) days. In the event the successful bidder elects to credit the balance, he or she will be required to post bond and furnish surety acceptable to the Master Commissioner. The bond shall be for the unpaid purchase price and bear interest and the rate of twelve percent (12%) per annum until paid in full.

(2) PLEASE NOTE: The real estate SHALL BE SOLD SUBJECT TO ALL city, state, county, and school real estate taxes, whether current or delinquent.

(4) Where the real estate has insurable improvements, the successful bidder shall, at his or her own expense, carry fire and extended coverage insurance on said improvements from the date of sale until the purchase price is fully paid, to the extent of the Court appraised value of said improvements or the unpaid balance of the purchase price, whichever is less, at a minimum, with a loss clause payable to the Master Commissioner or the appropriate Plaintiff. Failure of the successful bidder to effect such insurance shall not affect the validity of the sale or the successful bidder's liability thereunder, but shall entitle, but not require, the Plaintiff(s) to effect said insurance and furnish the policy or evidence thereof to the Master Commissioner, if it so desires, and the premium thereon or the property portion thereof shall be charged to the successful bidder as the successful bidder's cost.

(5) The property shall otherwise be sold free and clear of any right, title and interest of all parties to the action and of their liens and encumbrances thereon excepting easements and restrictions of record in the Anderson County Clerk's Office, and such right of redemption which may exist in favor of the United States of America or the Defendant(s), and any matters disclosed by an accurate survey and inspection of the property.

Atmos Energy also is proposing several new tariff provisions and modification of others:

1) Permanent approval of the Company's Weather Normalization Adjustment (WNA) mechanism.

2) Establishment of a Margin Loss Rider (MLR) and a System Development Rider (SDR), each of which may increase residential rates an amount to be calculated periodically upon implementation of the riders.

3) Modification of the General Firm Sales Service (Rate G-1) and the Interruptible Sales Service (Rate G-2) to allow for Natural Gas Vehicle (NGV) Service.

4) Establish a new Service Charge Door Tag Fee of $10.00.

5) Incorporation of revisions to 807 KAR 5:006 into the tariff.

All other charges not specifically mentioned herein shall remain the same as those presently in effect. The proposed rates will result in an overall approximate increase in the amount of $13,367,575 or 8.6% with increases of approximately $8,303,791 or 8.98% for residential consumers, and $2,996,879 or 8.07% for commercial consumers, and approximately $181,500 or 4.25% for industrial consumers. Charges from other gas revenue will increase $97,171 or 5.1%. The average monthly bill for residential consumers will increase approximately $4.50 or 8.98%. The average monthly bill for commercial consumers will increase approximately $14.42 or 8.07%. The average monthly bill for industrial customers will increase approximately $72.95 or 4.25%. The impact on each customer's average bill will vary according to individual consumption or transportation levels. However, this impact can be determined by each customer by applying the proposed rates listed above to their respective average consumption or transportation levels.

Be Responsible

Owning a pet is a big responsibility, sometimes too big. Finding a new home for a pet can be hard, especially for an exotic pet like a snake. Not everyone likes snakes, which may explain why some pet owners have chosen to leave their Burmese pythons in the wild in the Florida Everglades.

Burmese pythons come from Asia. They do not belong in the Florida Everglades, but more and more of them are being found there. Some escaped there during the hurricanes. Some were left there by pet owners. Burmese pythons eat a lot, and because of that, there are fewer raccoons, possums and rabbits in the Everglades, making for less food for other animals. The pythons are also eating larger animals, like alligators, deer and panthers.

Burmese pythons are a big problem in the Everglades, and to stop them from wiping out some animal species and moving into other areas of Florida, wildlife officials now have programs in place that make it harder for pet owners to get a Burmese python. There are also programs to remove the snakes from the area.

Name That Animal

Depending upon where you are camping, you might see a lot of wildlife. Fill in the blanks to name some of the animals you might come across.

HOROSCOPES

Look out, Capricorn. A blowout is about to occur, and for once, it will not involve you. Step in and play mediator only if need be. A deadline is moved up.

A good friend rebounds, and you have much to celebrate. Invite them out for dinner, Aries. Words are exchanged at home, and the cat is out of the bag!

Settle down, Cancer. A loved one really does have your best interest at heart. Hear what they have to say, but don't heed it. A health crisis ends.

Breathe, Libra, breathe. Your coworker is not out to get you. They want to help, and you could use their help. Two heads are better than one.

A reversal in opinions makes everyone at work sigh in relief. You dodged a bullet, Aquarius. Invite the gang over for a little celebration. A plea at home gets louder.

Freedom comes at a price. Remember those who have sacrificed, Taurus. A mix-up in communication at home gets tempers flaring. Ease the tensions with a day out.

Stay low, Leo. Too many things are happening right now for you to take any unnecessary risks. A home improvement project ends with a bang.

Cat got your tongue, Scorpio? Good. Too many opinions have been expressed as is. Keep yours to yourself until a more opportune time arises.

Indecision at work impedes progress. Gather the team for a little pep talk. You won't believe what it does for your spirits, Pisces. A package arrives.

A relative is on the mend, and you are responsible. Transfer your caring skills to another, Gemini. An agreement among friends begins to unravel.

A change in ownership is no cause for anxiety, Virgo. What's done is done. Do your best to keep your emotions in check and your nose to the grindstone.

Seriously, Sagittarius. You can pitch a fit all you want, but nothing is going to get done this week. The timing is not right. Next week will be a different story.
